Career Exploratory

For your child to make good career decisions, he or she must explore and investigate many careers. Active participation in career exploration activities will help your child become aware of the many career opportunities available and the steps that need to be taken to reach his or her career goals. Some advantages of career exploration include:

- Understanding the work environment of interesting careers.
- Exposing your child to a variety of careers that he or she may have never considered.
- Discovering the various types of post-high school education and training, as well as their costs. In this manner, your child will not waste getting training unrelated to his or her chosen career.
- The number one reason students drop out of college or training is a lack of career focus. Also, the more undecided a student is, the more likely he or she will need to spend extra money and years in college or training to earn a degree or certificate.
